“ I can't stand the thought of her being gone. I miss going in there every morning and waking her up and her taking us to school. Or picking us up with a huge smile on her face and telling us to hurry up and not to get ran over. I miss going on rides and laughing and jamming out and talking. I miss when she would come in with no pants on just cause she didn't want to. I miss everything so bad. She was my rock. We may be many years apart but we were so close you couldn't pull us apart even if you wanted to. I'm never going to have someone so much of a mother to me as this women. She was my grandmother but she did way more in her lifetime as a mother for me than my own mother ever will. And I will make sure that everyone knows that.
