“ Tom and I worked together and he always carried a harmonica in his pocket. He'd ask if you wanted to hear a song, pull out the harmonica and blow a sad breathy note. He was always quick with an absolutely ridiculous story that always started with him being found in a dumpster in the cold as a baby and was only found because he asked his granny for a pork chop. He was one of the funniest and most genuine people I've ever had the privilege of knowing. I will miss him.
